K. READING COMPREHENSION — TEXT 1

Are you using AI, or is AI using you?

Every student knows the feeling. The essay is due tomorrow, the document is still empty, and your brain suddenly decides that reorganizing your entire bedroom is urgent. So you open a chatbot, type three words, and forty seconds later the essay is done. Problem solved — or is it? Right now, half of this class is probably thinking about a task they are avoiding.

Researchers who study learning are not against these tools. They worry about one thing only: the difference between using AI to think and using it so you don't have to. A student who asks an AI to explain the difference between its and it's is learning something. A student who asks it to write the whole paragraph is outsourcing the one thing school is actually for.

So here is the honest question. When you open that app tonight, what are you really asking it to do?

Glossary: due = com prazo para • essay = redação • to outsource = terceirizar, passar para outro

1. According to the text, researchers are worried about
 - () a) students who use technology in class.
 - () b) the high price of AI applications.
 - () c) students using AI instead of thinking.
 - () d) teachers who don't understand AI.
2. The word outsourcing is closest in meaning to
 - () a) understanding deeply.
 - () b) passing a task to someone else.
 - () c) refusing to do something.
 - () d) improving a skill.
3. In "So you open a chatbot", the linking word so introduces
 - () a) a contrast.
 - () b) an addition.
 - () c) a condition.
 - () d) a consequence.
4. Find three verbs in the present continuous in the text.

L. READING COMPREHENSION — TEXT 2 ENEM style

How many subscriptions are you paying for?

Ask a teenager how much they spend on streaming and the answer is almost always "nothing — it's my parents' account". Ask the parents, and the number changes completely. One video platform, one music app, one cloud for the photos, one game pass: separately, each one looks cheap. Together, they cost more than the sneakers everybody wants.

Companies know this. They design the price so that it feels invisible: small, monthly, automatic. You don't decide to pay it every month — you simply forget to cancel it. That is not an accident; it is the product.

The conscious consumer question from Chapter 5 still works here. Before your next purchase, ask yourself: do I really want this, or do I just want to want it?

Glossary: subscription = assinatura • cheap = barato • purchase = compra • to cancel = cancelar

1. The main purpose of the text is to
 - () a) convince the reader to cancel all streaming services.
 - () b) compare prices of different platforms.
 - () c) make the reader reflect on automatic, invisible spending.
 - () d) criticise parents who pay for their children.
2. The pronoun it in "it is the product" refers to
 - () a) the music app.
 - () b) the pair of sneakers.
 - () c) the parents' account.
 - () d) the fact that people forget to cancel.

3. According to the text, subscriptions feel cheap because

- () a) teenagers never pay for them.
- () b) each one is a small, separate monthly amount.
- () c) the companies are losing money.
- () d) they are cheaper than sneakers.

4. “Do I just want to want it?” suggests that

- () a) the desire may come from outside, not from a real need.
- () b) the reader should buy the product immediately.
- () c) wanting things is always wrong.
- () d) teenagers don’t know what they want.
