J. GRAMMAR REFERENCE 2 non-defining relative clauses

Para que servem informação EXTRA

EN Non-defining relative clauses give extra information about people, places and things. The sentence still makes sense without them.

PT A oração non-defining traz informação extra. Se você apagar, a frase continua de pé.

► The Rio Carnival, WHICH IS THE BIGGEST IN THE WORLD, happens in February.

Vírgulas sempre entre vírgulas

EN We always use commas around a non-defining relative clause.

PT Non-defining vem sempre entre vírgulas.

► My husband, who is scared of heights, loved it.

Nunca THAT which · who · whose

EN We don't use that in non-defining relative clauses. Use which for things and who or whose for people.

PT that não existe em non-defining. Use which para coisas e who/whose para pessoas.

► ...at Desert Dreams Ranch, WHICH is beautiful. (nunca that)

O pronome nunca sai • which para a frase toda não dá para omitir

EN In non-defining clauses the pronoun can never be removed. Which can also refer back to the whole idea of the sentence.

PT Em non-defining não dá para apagar o pronome. E which pode retomar a ideia toda da frase.

► They break easily, WHICH represents a clean break with the old year.

COMMON ERROR • ERRO CLÁSSICO

P. READING 1 The Chiang Mai Flower Festival

The Chiang Mai Flower Festival

by Max Pereira

Tourists who travel to Chiang Mai in Thailand in early February will smell the flowers before they see them. For one fantastic weekend, an unbelievable number of flowers decorate the city that is known as the "Rose of the North." The people who live in this city take their customs very seriously. Every year, Chiang Mai has several festivals. Some of them have been part of the local culture for centuries.

The flower festival has been an annual custom since the 1970s. It is a famous celebration that brings people from all over the world. It celebrates the end of the cool season, when all the new flowers appear. I visited on the first weekend of February and enjoyed all three days of this exciting floral atmosphere.

People create incredible flower displays everywhere in the city. These displays show respect for the ancient floral art of the people of the Lanna Kingdom, who built Chiang Mai in 1296. Visitors will love seeing the ruins of the city walls, which are over 700 years old. These walls were built to protect the city.

Flowers are one of the most important businesses in the north of Thailand. People from Chiang Mai take the phrase "flower power" to another level. I especially love the incredible orchids that you can see in local orchid farms. You can book tours to the farms, where you can buy an orchid and help a local business owner.

On the first day, I recommend going to Suan Buak Had Public Park, where you will find flower displays, flower contests and cultural performances. But that's just the beginning! All over the city, people decorate their streets, homes and stores with beautiful flowers and plants.

You must not miss the parade on Saturday, when people dress in traditional costumes. They sing and dance on floats decorated with flowers and plants. The floats were my favorite part of the festival. Don't forget the ceremony in the park on Saturday evening. Find out which float wins the contest and who is named "Queen of the Festival." You must try the mango sticky rice!

The Chiang Mai Flower Festival offers history, culture, great food and incredible colors and smells. This was my first visit, but it definitely won't be my last!

GLOSSARY • unbelievable = inacreditável • custom = costume • for centuries = há séculos • cool season = estação fria • display = exposição • ruins = ruínas • to protect = proteger • orchid = orquídea • to book = reservar • float = carro alegórico • sticky rice = arroz doce

Q. READING 2 • CULTURE New Year's around the world

New Year's around the world

At midnight on December 31, people around the world celebrate the start of a new year with parties and fireworks. However, some parts of the world have unique ways of starting a new year.

PEDRO • SPAIN. In Spain, before New Year's Eve, all the supermarkets sell lots of grapes, which are sometimes put in plastic glasses. At midnight, we try to eat one grape for every chime of the clock. It is good luck to finish all 12 grapes before the clock finishes the 12 chimes, but it can be hard to eat them so quickly.

BENEDITA • BRAZIL. Where I live, in Rio de Janeiro, we like to go to the beach for a big New Year's Eve celebration with fireworks, music and dancing! Everyone wears white because we believe it will bring us peace in the new year. There is one custom that I love — after midnight, we jump over seven waves and make a wish every time we jump. New Year's is the time of year that I enjoy the most!

PALESA • SOUTH AFRICA. Hillbrow, the neighborhood where I live, is famous for a special custom that local people do for New Year's. This tradition, which started in the 1990s, is to throw old furniture out of the window! People used to throw all sorts of things out of their windows, like tables, microwaves or chairs, as a way to get rid of their old things so they could get new things for a new year. I think it's fun but a bit dangerous. Sometimes people got hurt, so now people do it less.

KEIKO • JAPAN. New Year's in Japan is normally spent with family. We clean and decorate our homes, and lots of people also visit temples. Soba noodles, which are long, thick noodles, are the traditional food to eat at this time of year. They are thought to be a symbol of a long life because they are long. But they also break easily, which represents a clean break with the old year.

ARJUN • INDIA. In the days leading up to New Year's in Goa, all the young people help make an "old man" out of straw, old clothes and paper. We then sit the "old man" in a chair in the middle of our parties. When it's midnight, we set it on fire! It represents all the bad or sad things that happened in the past year, so we can start the new year with only positive thoughts. The bonfire always creates a great atmosphere, too!

GLOSSARY • unique = único • chime = badalada • good luck = boa sorte • to make a wish = fazer um pedido • wave = onda • neighborhood = bairro • furniture = móveis • to get rid of = se livrar de • to get hurt = se machucar • temple = templo • straw = palha • to set on fire = pôr fogo em • bonfire = fogueira

R. READING 3 An email about an unusual experience

Davi's email

From: Davi • To: Aline

Hi Aline, I'm at Sydney Airport! We're waiting to go home. We were here at the same time as Vivid Sydney. It was awesome but totally unexpected. Vivid Sydney is a festival that has lights, art and new ideas. There were amazing light displays on major buildings like the Opera House and on Sydney Harbour Bridge. It was spectacular! Believe it or not, we went to the festival every night. My parents, who enjoy trying new foods, loved all the food markets.

The festival had so many great events. I found the walking tour really interesting. The most unusual part was the old train station. We climbed down stairs and walked through eight underground rooms, each with different lights and sounds. It may sound strange, but each room made me feel different. You would have loved the one with pink lights and electronic dance music!

Some events were about the ocean. I liked one called "The Last Ocean," which was about Antarctica. There was art made of plastic from the ocean. It looked like a huge piece of ice! There was also an event that presented new ideas to help ocean plants and animals.

I liked Australia, and I really liked Sydney. It's a very pretty city, and the people are friendly, too. But I loved Vivid! I ate delicious food and learned a lot. And I was surprised that all the events were free. How was your trip? Send some pictures! See you soon, Davi
